FOLLOWING 16 YEARS at Parish-Hadley Associates, David Kleinberg launched his own full-service interior design firm in 1997. He describes his sensibility as "wide-ranging in style, yet always modern and understated." Traditional Now: Interiors by David Kleinberg (Monacelli Press, 2011) documents that exquisite sensibility in action, from the room's overall layout and appointments to the myriad custom details, including the rugs he often designs for clients. Elle Décor, Architectural Digest, House Beautiful, Interior Design, and Veranda have all covered his career extensively. On the boards for 2014 are, among other projects, the interiors for a 300-foot yacht.

ESTABLISHED IN 1991, David Scott describes his aesthetic as "warm, contemporary, and eclectic, rooted in the lifestyles of my clients and the architecture." Pointed Leaf Press recently published David Scott: Outside the Box, a monograph that reveals his approach in full. Scott's work has long garnered coverage in such magazines as New York Spaces, House Beautiful, Gotham, Hamptons, and Elle Décor. Coming up is a contemporary waterfront summer residence in Sag Harbor, New York; a complete renovation of a Lake Shore Drive apartment in Chicago, Illinois; a hillside estate in Paradise Valley, Arizona; and the decoration of several Manhattan apartments.

SINCE DENNIS MCAVENA FOUNDED HIS OWN FIRM IN 1992, he has devoted himself to realizing a style that, he says, is "tailored and classic, whether transitional, traditional, or modern. Comfortable and attractive, my projects represent the collaborative efforts of client and designer. Contrived spaces are not my style. Each space should always have a unique spirit of its own." House Beautiful and other publications regularly show his work. Highlights for McAvena this past year include participation in the 2013 Southampton Showhouse. Upcoming projects include a cottage in Nantucket, a Palm Beach residence, and a country home in his home state of Ohio.
